

Five Minutes to Fire Safety

Topic: More Online Resources

As we accumulate more and more information, knowing where to find something is usually more important than remembering the specific piece of information.

That's why the Kansas State Fire Marshal's Office has a number of resources available online for you to utilize. Last time we looked at a few online resources available at www.accesskansas.org/firemarshal. Here are a few more resources available at the click of a mouse:

FireFacts

These provide additional information on checklist requirements. In the handbook, they're included at the back but online they can be found at <http://www.accesskansas.org/firemarshal/FirePrevention/firefactindex.htm>. You can find documentation samples for emergency light testing, fire drills, generator testing, and more. You can also find more information on acceptable locking arrangements, fire-safe decorations, and what to do if your sprinkler or fire alarm system is taken out of service.

Fire Prevention Division

In addition to these emailed tips, the Fire Prevention Division page, found at <http://www.accesskansas.org/firemarshal/FirePrevention/preventionhome.htm>, now features our new Fire Safety Blog. Although the topics won't pertain to just schools and facilities that care for children, it will still be an online resource for fire safety ideas and thoughts about how to make fire prevention work better in your facility.

Also available from this webpage is a link to the Training Request Form. Representatives from the KSFM's Prevention Division are available to train your faculty and staff during teacher in-service days or other large group settings. Simply fill out this form and return it by mail or fax. Once it's received, you'll be contacted for additional information. Any training is available to you at no cost.

These aren't the only resources available online! Keep checking back for new information!
